Advantages to Choosing Private Pay Therapy Services

· Recommendations for services do not have to meet the requirements of an insurance company that may deny or restrict services based on diagnosis or level of impairment according to standardized testing.

· Most insurance companies require patients to use an approved clinic preventing services within the natural home environment or private school setting hence costing you more time and money commuting to sessions.

· Many insurance companies provide low reimbursement for evaluations; hence, many companies complete non-comprehensive evaluations and reports to save time and money.

· Some insurance companies delay payments or approval or request additional testing forcing providers to place your child's services on hold.

· Most clinics require you to schedule services based on their availability possibly placing you on a waitlist or back to back between other children.

· Many clinics save money utilizing therapy assistants to provide treatment instead of the therapist that completed the evaluation. Playapy uses a registered and licensed therapist with over two decades of experience to administer treatment sessions.

· Many clinics do not include parents in the therapy sessions preventing full understanding of therapy strategies, recommendations and activities to implement in the home. Playapy uses a family-centered educational approach to therapy including home programs and recommendations.

· In a clinic setting, your child is exposed to more children and an increased risk of acquiring germ-related illnesses or injury from other children.

· In a home setting, Playapy is able to demonstrate play strategies with parents using objects and toys already in the home or suggest items that would work best for your home and child's interests.

As a boutique occupational therapy provider, Playapy is available to meet your unique needs in the comfort of your home or private school. Consider working with Playapy a smart choice for your family's current lifestyle and as an investment into your child's future success!
